Longitudinal Surveys of Australian Youth

Longitudinal Surveys of Australian Youth is a program of annual surveys of young people jointly managed by ACER and the Commonwealth Department of Education, Training and Youth Affairs. The surveys focus on the education and labour market experiences of groups of young Australians, beginning from their middle years of secondary schooling. Data collected include basic demographic variables, as well as information about educational and labour force participation extending over a number of years.

The 1995 Year 9 Cohort (Y95)

In 1995, a nationally representative sample of approximately 13,000 Year 9 students was selected to form the first cohort of the new Longitudinal Surveys of Australian Youth program. The sample was constructed by randomly selecting two Year 9 classes from a national sample of 300 schools designed to represent state and sector. Reading and numeracy tests were administered to students in their schools to provide information on early school achievement for use in later analyses of educational and labour market participation. Students also completed a background questionnaire about their educational and vocational plans and attitudes to school. In 1996 these students provided information in response to a mailed questionnaire. Information was also obtained from their schools about curricula and organisation. In 1997 members of the sample were contacted in the first of the annual telephone interviews (conducted by AC Nielsen, then Rerak Research). That questionnaire included questions on school; transitions from school; post school education and training; work; job history; job search history; non-labour force activities; health, living arrangements and finance; and general attitudes. Subsequent surveys have asked similar questions but with the emphasis changing over time from school, to post-school education and training, and work .

The 1999 Telephone Survey

In 1999 the 1995 Year 9 sample consisted primarily of young people in the first year following the completion of secondary school. Therefore, the emphasis was on the transition from school. The section on school included questions on the certification these young people would have received as a result of completing school. Other areas that received particular attention in 1999 were job training, life-long learning and volunteer work. These topics were included in addition to the areas on which information is sought annually (see above).

AC Nielsen conducted the 1999 telephone survey. They approached a total of 9,663 panel members and 8,783 were successfully interviewed, representing a response rate of 90.9%. There were 344 refusals, 223 were unable to be tracked, 178 were away and 133 were unable to be interviewed for other reasons. This technical report details the responses provided by cohort members in 1999.
